

Contents

Foreword, xi

Acknowledgments, xiii

PART ONE
THE SCOPE OF THE
STUDY
AND THE DIAGNOSIS

A note on the methodology of this study

1 What Is a Profession?, 7

Defining a profession

2 The Changing Work Setting of Professionals, 15

3 New Clients, New Client Needs, 21

Organization as client ■ Immediate, intermediate, and ultimate clients ■
Dependence versus independence of the client

4 The Changing Needs of Society, 33

New social needs ■ Trained incapacity ■ Knowledge explosion and specialization ■ The compensatory role of the applied behavioral sciences

5 The Profession's Perspective on Itself, 43

Increasing convergence ■ Increasing specialization ■ Increasing bureaucratization

6 The Changing Values and Needs of Students, 53

7 New Directions for Professional Education, 59

Summary of criticisms of the professions ■ Possible directions of reform or innovation

PART TWO
THE PRESCRIPTION

8 A Model of the Process of Planned Change, 75

A general change model

9 Change Goals, Points of Entry, and First Steps, 85

Force-field analysis ■ Selecting a point of entry ■ First steps

- 10 Innovative Mechanisms for Professional Education, 97
Mechanisms applicable to professional education ■ Mechanisms applicable to the early career
- 11 Some Bold Horizons: A New Kind of Professional Education, 129
Element 1: new learning modules ■ Element 2: a new kind of faculty ■
Element 3: a new administrative structure and academic calendar ■
Element 4: perpetual self-diagnosis and evaluation research

References, 151

Appendix: List of Persons Interviewed, 157

Index, 161